A REASON TO LIVE

Aung Ko, born into a very devout Buddhist family, may seem an unlikely church leader. At the age of seven, he began to suffer from a disease in one of his eyes. Despite his anguish, his parents couldn't afford to take him to a clinic, and the other eye was infected, too. Aung Ko's condition worsened until, as a teenager, he became completely blind. After seventh grade, he was unable to continue his studies.

Adrift and depressed, Aung Ko saw nothing but emptiness before him, and attempted suicide several times.

One day, when Aung Ko was almost 30, a Christian evangelist came to his village and talked to people about Jesus' power to lift people out of despair. As a result of the preacher's messages, Aung Ko and his family were baptized into a Christian church.

Unable to read, Aung Ko turned to audio sources for information, and that search led him to Adventist World Radio (AWR). He listened to the radio daily, doing his best to capture every detail.

As his knowledge about God grew, Aung Ko called his neighbors and formed a small group, which soon began to meet regularly.

With his easygoing ways, Aung Ko has become a popular speaker and respected leader. He founded a community service group, the Golden Eagle Handicap Foundation, which helps people in need in and around the community.

"I am very happy that I have come to know God and the truth of the Sabbath," said Aung Ko. "Without the message that the radio taught me, my life would make no sense."

The Adventist World Radio (AWR) currently broadcasts in over a hundred languages, and has led thousands of people to understand and accept the distinctive truths for this time. Every time you distribute your regular offering as suggested by the Combined Offering Plan, twenty percent of your offering goes to the World Mission Fund, which helps to support different missionary agencies, like the Adventist World Radio. But if in addition to that you are impressed by God to send a special offering to the AWR, you may access <https://awr.org/support/donate/> and make your donation.

As we return our tithe and offerings, may we put our desires last and God first.
